

Figure 2. Reuters published without caption.

Figure 3. The charred remains of a girl's bedroom are seen through a shattered window of a home in the Rancho Santa Fe area of San Diego, California October 23, 2007. Wildfires stoked by fierce winds burned unchecked across Southern California for a third day on Tuesday with 300,000 people in San Diego alone evacuated as flames destroyed or threatened homes from humble forest cabins to luxury villas.

REUTERS/Mario Anzuoni (UNITED STATES)

Figure 4. Reuters published without caption.

Figure 5 & 6. A doll lies in the charred rubble of a home in the Rancho Santa Fe area of San Diego, California October 23, 2007. Towering wildfires burned out of control across Southern California for a third day on Tuesday as 500,000 people fled the San Diego area and firefighters made a desperate stand to save a mountain town ringed by flames. REUTERS/Mario Anzuoni (UNITED STATES)